B. Other Items of Concern to the Committee

14. Psychological Intelligence Support

Problem: To recommend the necessary arrangements for interagency support of psychological warfare.

Status: The problem has been discussed with all agencies concerned both from the planning or operating viewpoint and from the intelligence side. As a result of these conversations a tentative break-down has been made of the kinds of intelligence support that are required.

The immediate need is: (a) to find out if this is an accurate, complete, and meaningful break-down; (b) to determine who will provide each type of intelligence, or what portion of each type, and the extent to which each requires interagency coordination; (c) to clarify agency responsibilities and to recommend appropriate ways of achieving necessary coordination. CIA has the responsibility and initiative to see that appropriate intelligence support is provided for psychological warfare and that the intelligence activities of government departments and agencies in this field are properly coordinated.
